MISS BARRYMORE A CHARMING 'COUSIN'

She Gives a Housewarming in . Several Senses in Opening the New Hudson Theatre with Pretty New Play.

MAUVE AND TAN CONSPICUOUS

Speaks in a Mauve and Tan Voice of a Mauve and Tan Ro-

"Cousin Kate" gave a housewarming the new Hudson Theatre, in Fortyorth street, last night, and every one who went was glad, for Cousin Kate was Ethel Barrymore (or the other way

Of late evenings we had grown used seeing Miss Barrymore, dressed uply and soberly in black, sitting on side of the footlights. She might have been there last night, so far as unfeeted charm and naturalness went There was hardly a minute when she ered into Hubert Henry Davies's little day, whose bright lines she brightened her wit, and she made herself and every one else at ease the minute of ber arrival.

There was considerable anticipation ever her coming. Everybody on the and in the audience-wished that Cousin Kate would come. Everything would be all right when Cousin Kate came. A kindly old lady and a red-haired boy said so; then said it again; and a quiet, Christian-Endeavor kind of eway two days before the wedding because she was so good he couldn't stand er, looked the sentiment.

Straightened Things in Books. Dousin Kate would fix everything all t. She would straighten everything (she did it in books she wrote) and the recreant swain would be brought --But there, suddenly, was Cousin Kare, to speak for herself and act for others. She had slipped in without making eny extra work for the orchestra and. calcium. The audience relieved Iron-Hand, the Conscientious Usher, from his traditional task, while Miss Barrymore stood there a pretty picture in mauve and tan. Then, when her demonstrative admirers gave her the chance, she turned on the mauve-and-tan music of her voice and straightway began doing ms uve-and-tan things.

She had a little mauve-and-tan romance of her own to tell. She had let a nice strange man on the train pull up er window, or pull it down-"or which

And the artist, who had a delightful linish brogue and a marvellous gall, went to the house, too. Of course, it turned to the house, too. Of course, it turned to that he was the obliging hero of the railroad romance. He told her a fairy story and that he loved her (which is often one and the same thing, where upon a storm came up and the new stage hands of the new theatre shook eut some very new tin thunder, and the prince of Pilsen," the most musical contents the waste of the result of the prince of Pilsen, the most musical contents are the waste of the result of the prince of Pilsen, the most musical contents are the waste of the result of the result cut some very new tin thunder, and what with a fire in the grate and tragen the table, Cousin Kate and the ardent Irishman had the most romantic leind of a time.

But after the storm came Amy, the Christian Endeavor girl, with an umbrella and the tidy bit of news that the strain was the man who had run back to marry her.

Cousin Kate grew white and unsteady and touched your heart at hearing this, and she didn't smile the flashing Barryshor smile until it transpired in the end that the Christian Endeavor girl thought she would prefer a clergyman to an tartist for a husband anyway, whereat the set Ireland free, to the heavenly joy of Cousin Kate.

Bruce McRae was splendid and quite tressistible as the fanciful, fascinating that he won so dear a prize too easily. There probably wasn't a man on the other side of the footlights who wouldn't have been ready te fling down his opera hat and fight for her.

Her Steady Rise.

Paled McRae was splendid and quite the Herald Square.

"Babes in Toyland" has made such a hit at the Majestic that late-comers are turned away nightly.

Orrin Johnson, in "Hearts Courage—

The patrons of the New Star Theatre samed much pleased with "A Great Temptation" last night. It is a mild thriller, written and produced by Owen Dayls, who, judging from the number of revolvers in evidence, must either be interested in a firearm factory, or else get a commission on the nickel-plated shooters that are drawn on the slightest provocation. There are no conceeled weepons in this melodrama; almost every other sesture is hand to hip and treent arms in true cowboy fushion.

To those familiar with the gentic art of poker the game on the Mississippi steamboat in the lirst art is a wonder. There are only 18,000 in the pot, and, of course, it is raked in by "a gambler and a gentleman," who holds four nees to should be a game of kings. The game of the same of kings. There probably collishs who wolders had eased yet fing down his operabate and fight for her.

Her Steady Rise.

Beatrice Agnew rose steadily by subduced effort in the role of the too-good to-be-true Amy until a general burst of explause in the last act told her she had achieved complete success.

Mrs. Thomas Whiffen played Mrs.

Bys. for with gracious gentility and ease of the plause in the last act told her she had been at the particle of the plause of the plause of the plause of the plause of the property of the broad of the condition of the condition of the condition of the condition of the plause of the plause was surpassed only by the simplicity, beauty and ease of Miss Barrymore, who, of all the women's stars to appear in new plays thus far, may justly claim the season's Mr. Davies has done better with "Cousin Kate" than he did with "Cynthia." The comedy, while illogical, is a pleagant, autumnal bit of coloring, more like a whort marazine story with sort had-tones than like a play. Its harmony might be irrorved, however, by eliminating those faise notes which Kate with:

ERMINIE' REVIVES FINE MEMORIES

Francis Wilson Gives Opera, and It Is Like Getting a Whiff of Lavender from an Old Chest.

There was a beautiful breeze of good old lavender—a sort of aroma of the chest that mamma loved—when the on the new production of "Erminie." There were three things that impresse the man who saw "Erminie" when it ran for one thousand three hundred and forty-eight or nine nights, or something like that, and they were all to the good for the play. In the first place, Francis Wilson's legs haven't grown a bit more banty, and-most remarkable of all things-he knows it. In the second place Jessie Bartlett Davis can sing as hard on the high notes and as low on the short notes as Pauline Hall and the rest of the famous original "Erminie" Casino outfit. Third, Big "Bill" Broderick is as good a side-partner of Francis Wil-son as the lamented Daboll would ever

Then you will recollect that "Erminie" was a tuneful product, with the benefit of the Casino's old-time, well-trained chorus to back it, and you have to study what was produced last night, with the possible exception of Madge Lessing in blithe, gay child that loves a soldierloves a man-and, oddly enough, she loves as women do.

There will not be any other production in the Casino for the balance of the season. "Emninie" is too good and too friendly to take away.

Mrs. Robert Goelet Coming. PARIS, Oct. 20 .- Mrs. Robert Goelet, Robert Walton Goelet, Mr. Limantour "The Silver Sipper," with its pretty Robert Walton Gesic, Ar. Linarkour, scenery and scores of comedians and chorus girls, began a week at the Montauk Theatre last night.

"The Knickerbocker Girl" was presented at the Columbia.

Some men buy shoes because they like the style. Wear, price, even comfort, are of less import-

Now, it is a fact, susceptible to ocular proof, that there is more distinctive style in Regal shoes than in any other shoes. The most expensive custom shoe makers in New York, Boston, and London are making shoes for us all the time. These go to our factory and serve as models. We do not slavishly follow them-we have ideas of our own, many of which the swell custom man is glad to adopt for his own trade. We spend time, and money, and energy, to get the latest limit in style.

We make 149 styles to suit all tastes, and we serve equally well the man who wants the "latest" and the conservative man who asks for the same shoe year after
